Handwriting analysis chart

Every shape the 19-question handwriting personality test asks about. Line drawings, not photographs. The test asks which form is closest to your own writing; it does not score how well you draw it.

handwritingpersonalitytest.online/tools/sample-chart

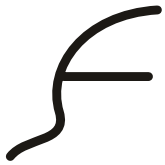

Numbers

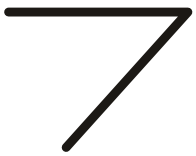

Open 4
Open 4 with a crossbar and no closed triangle

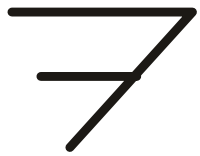

Closed 4
Closed 4 with a triangular top

Curved 4
An open 4 whose stem bends instead of meeting

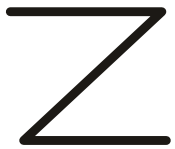

Plain 7
A 7 with no crossbar

Crossed 7
A 7 with a horizontal crossbar

Curved 2
A 2 with the usual curve

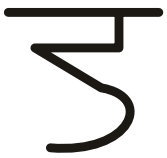

Angular 2
A 2 made of straight corners, like a Z

Looped 2
A 2 that closes a loop at the bottom

Plain 5
A 5 with a short top and a closed bowl

Hatted 5
A 5 with a flat bar across the top

Open 5
A 5 whose bowl does not close

One stroke
An 8 drawn as one continuous stroke

Two circles
An 8 made of two stacked circles

With a tail
An 8 with an extra stroke below

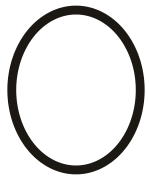

Open hook
A 9 whose stem stays an open hook

Closed loop
A 9 with a closed upper loop

Long tail
A 9 whose stem keeps going

Plain 0
An oval zero with no slash

Slashed 0
A zero with a diagonal slash

Dotted 0
A zero with a dot in the middle

Plain stroke
A 1 drawn as one straight stroke

With a foot
A 1 with a top flag and a base

Letters

Single storey
Single-storey handwritten a, one counter

Double storey
Double-storey a like the printed letter

Open tail
Lowercase g with an open hook

Looped tail
Lowercase g with a closed loop

Printed g
Double-storey g with an ear and a closed lower bowl

With a spur
A capital G with a short inward spur

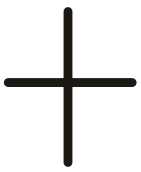

Printed G
A capital G like the printed letter

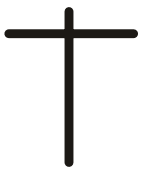

With a flourish
A capital G with an extra sweeping stroke

No bar
A t stem with no crossbar

Through the middle
A t crossed at mid-height

Near the top
A t crossed high on the stem

Close dot
An i with the dot close to the stem

High dot
An i with the dot high above the stem

Circle
An i with an open circle instead of a dot

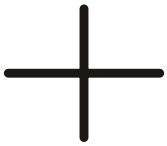

Straight tail
A y with a straight descender

Looped tail
A y with a looped descender

Symbols

A plus sign
A plus sign used in place of an ampersand

The et form
A traditional ampersand from the Latin et ligature

With a flourish
An ampersand with an extra sweeping stroke

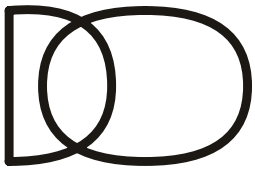

size

Ordinary
Letters about the height of a normal note

Small
Small letters sitting on the line

Large
Letters that fill the line

Spacing

Tight
Two words with a tight gap

Even
Two words with an even gap about one letter wide

Wide
Two words with a wide gap

link

Separate
Letters that do not touch

Some joins
A few letters joined, the rest apart

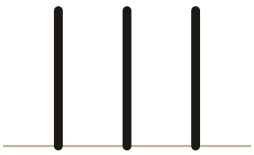

Continuous
Letters joined all the way through the word

Slant

Left
Downstrokes leaning left of vertical

Upright
Downstrokes near vertical

Right
Downstrokes leaning right, as in italic

Claimed traits, and what explains them instead

Shape	Claimed trait	What explains it instead
Open 4	Sociable	Taught in many US school hands
Closed 4	Guarded	Taught in many continental school hands
Crossed 7	Decisive	Separates 7 from a serifed 1
Slashed 0	Technical	Prevents 0 and O confusion
Single-storey a	Spontaneous	Taught in some national hands
Double-storey a	Conventional	The printed form taught first in English schools
Looped g or y	Imaginative	A feature of cursive models
Open g	Impatient	Common in print-style and quick hands
High t-bar	Ambitious	Moves with speed and with the model
Circled i-dot	Playful	Copied from a friend or a lettering book
Wide word gaps	Independent	Follows paper width and hurry
Right slant	Outgoing	Standard in italic models
Upright slant	Reserved	Standard in several European school scripts
Large letters	Confident	Follows paper, pen, and purpose
Continuous joins	Logical	A property of the script taught
Flourished &	Stylish	A printed form centuries old

When the text of a sample is held constant, handwriting experts predict personality close to chance (Neter and Ben-Shakhar, 1989). This chart names shapes. It does not name the person.